JULY 16TH, 1870. has greatly subsided, no doubt owing to the rrival of the men-of-war Barossa and Ashuelo The Erench settlement is, however, still paraded at night by the French Volunteer company. Proclamutions have been posted up inside and ontside the city, the translations of Which will see in the North China Daily News of morning; they appear to have bad a little effect in calming the minds of the Chinese. Whether they will be effectual in doing so entirely remains to be seen. Judging, however, from what occurred last night. I should think nothing but making a few examples of the ringlenders is likely to quell the disturbance, and it would have been a very easy thing for the Chinese authorities to have picked helf a dozen of them out, and made such an example of them. It is therefore, protty evident that they either en-courage the disturbances, or arm too weak to take such strong measures. Some time during last night a chimney caught fire in the Rue du Consulute, and a rather too numerous body of Chinese assembling, the police attempted drivethem away, and were received with ashower stones, They, however, succeeded in capturing one of the men who threw the stones, and the others ran away and were seen no more. The captive is on view in the Rue du Consulate, and will be pretty severely panished. There is a Chinese rumour prevalent in the town that the French have occupied the Taku. Forts, it may probably be tone, for the Chinese are always advance of us in news from the North. They knew of the Tientsin massicre two days befor we did, for before the Nanzing left for Tieutsin which was a day and a half before we bear the news, the merchants who had shipped goods in her offered to forfeit the freight if they would discharge them. This was told me by the Custom House, officer who was on board at the time. There is also a report going about that the No. 2 Chinese Ganboat, which left here say she was loaded with arms and ommunition whether it is true or not, I cannot tell. My opi nion is what we shall not have any disturbance here unless the French bombard-Tientsin, and that may probably exasperate the Chinese against the priests, and they may destroy their buildings between Zi-ca-wei and Fung, War Shan; but of their attacking the settlements I do not think there is the slightest fear. Tom Bola, who fell on his knees at his first. meeting with Blanchy, the "Bird of Paradiso." and has since been troubled with a slight heartaffection, is now readly to make a match with the Bird for £30,000 a side. - Poor Tom was for some time in a strait, having lost his balance, through the giving way of a bank, but we are glad to see that he is now coming round. May his shadow nover grow less, is the cordial wish of his friends, who pronounce Tom Bola the mobilest obammion that ever throw-as a heavyweight-his fortune into the ring. - Punch. What is Energy?

In out first article it was shown that energy; or the power of doing work, is of two kinds, namely, energy due to actual medion, and that caused by chemical separation. When we carry due to position. We ended by supposing that a stone to the top of a cliff, we violently a stone shot vertically apwards had been caught separate two bodies that attract one another, quantity or mark of matter as unchangeable, so state two bodies, the atoms of which are prepare that smid the many bewildering transformations to rush together and combine with one another steps in and tells us that energy is quite as the large or cosmical scale. unchangeable as mass, and that the conservation of both is equally complete. There is, however, this difference between the two things the particle, and it is hence more difficult to grasp the concention of an invariability of energy than of an invariability of mass. For instance, the mass of our luminary always remains the same. but its energy is always getting less. And now to return to our question,-What has become of the energy of the stone? Has this disappeared? Far from it; the energy with which the stone began its flight has no more disappeared from the universe of energy, than the coal, when we have borned it in our fire, disappears from the universe of matter. But this has taken place;-the energy has changed its form and become spent or has disappeared as energy of actual motion, in gaining for the stone a same mass, but it will not always retain the same energy. As a whole, energy is invariable, but it is always shifting about from particle to-position of advantage with regard to the force If we study this particular instance more minutely, we shall see that during the upward flight of the stone its energy of actual motion becomes gradually changed into energy of position, while the reverse will take place of position, while the reverse will take place during its downward flight, if we now suppose it dislodged from the top of the house. In this latter case the energy of position with which its and Water laid all over the House and Offices. downward flight is gradually reconverted into energy of actual motion, until at last, when | Caine Road, containing 4 Rooms each, with autount of velocity, and, therefore, of actual energy, which it had at first. Let us now revert, for a moment, to the definition of energy, which means the power of doing work, and we shall see at once how we may gauge numerically the quantity of energy which the stone possesses, and in order to simplify exactly one pound. If, therefore, it has velocity enough to carry it up one faot, it may be said to have energy enough to do one unit of work. one foot high to be one unit of work; and in like manner if it has velocity sufficient to carry it 16 feet high it may be said to have an energy equivalent to 16 units of work or foot-pounds city. Apply to as those units are sometimes called. Now, if the atone be discharged upwards with an initial velocity of 32 feet per second, it will rise 16 feet high, and it has therefore an energy represented. 16. But if its initial velocity be 64 feet par econd if will rise 64 feet high before it turns, and will therefore have energy represented by the Hence we see that by doubling the velocity the energy is quadrupled, and we might is increased nine times. This is expressed in general terms by saying that the energy orquantity of work a moving body can accomplish varies as the square of its velocity. This fact is well known to artillerymen, for a ball with a and Wellington Street, at present occupied by double velocity will penetrate much more than living as far into an obstacle-opposing its Let us now take the stone of pound weight having an initial velocity of 64 feet per second, and consider the stife of things at the precise miment when it is 48 feet high. It will at that 10 very conveniently situated on Marine Lo moment have an actual velocity of 32 feet per [No. 63, between Messes. John Bunn & Co. second, which, as we have seen, will represent | premises and Messrs. GIBB. LIVINGSTON. 16 u its of work. But it started from the ground | Co.'s Wharf. with 64 units of work in it; what therefore bas become of the difference or 48 units? Reidonly it has disappeared as actual energy; but the stone, being 48 feet high, beaut energy of position represented by 48 units; so that at this pricise element of its flight its actual energy (16), plus its energy of position (48), are ingether equal to the whole energy with which it atarted (64). 🦠 Here, then, we have no annihilation of energy but merely the transformation of it from actiful energy into that implied by position; nor have, me any creation of energy when the stone is on its downward flight, but merely the re-transformation of the energy of position into the original form of actual energy. Ny shall presently discuss what becomes this actual energy after the stone hustatruck the ground; but in the meantime, we would repeat our remark how intimate is the analogy between the physical and the social world - I both cases we have actual energy and energy of position, the only difference being that in the social world, it is impossible to measure energy with exactness, while in the mechanica world we can gauge it with the utmost precision Proteus like, this element energy is always changing its form; and hence arises the extreme difficulty of the subject, for we cannot ensily retain a sufficient geasp of the ever-changing element to argue experimentally regarding it " Al the varieties of physical energy may however, be embraced under the two heads already men tioned, namely, chergy of a tual motion and o position. We have chosen the force of gravity acting upon a slone shot up into the air, as on example; but there are other forces besides gravity. Thus, a watch newly wound-up is it a condition of visible advantage with respect to the force of the main-spring; and as it confinues to go it gradually loses this energy of position converting it into energy of motion, A cross bow bent is likewise in a position of advantage with respect to the spring of the how; and when its bolt is discharged, this energy of position is converted into that of motion. Thus again, a meteor, a railway train, a mountain torrent the wind, all represent energy of access visible motion; while a head of water may be classed slong with a stone at the top of a house us representing energy of position. The list which represents visible energy of motion and of position might be extended indefinitely; but we annot remember that there are also invisible molecular motions, which do not the less exis One of the best known of these molecular chergies is radiant light and heat a epocies which our traverse space with the endemone derrades all apace. Now, when this radiant lenergy falls upon a substance, part of it is absorbed, and in the process of absorption is converted into ordinary Office, East Point, t proviously travorsed the thin ether of space has now become linked with group palpable mitter, and manifests itself in a motion which it produces in the particles of this matter. The violence of this rolatory or vortex-like motion. will thus form a measure of the heat which the unities contains. Another species of molecular energy consists of electricity in motion. When an electric current is moving along a wire, we have therein the progress of a power moving like light with enormous velocity, and, like light, silent in its opposition. Silent, wo say, if it meets with no resistance, but precedingly formidable if it be apposed : for the nwe-inspiring flush is not so much the electricity itself as the visible punishment which it has inflicted on the air for daring to impede its progress. Had there been a set of stout wires between the thunder-cloud and the earth, the fluid would have passed into the ground without disturbance. The molecular energies which we have now lescribed may be imagined to represent motion f some nort not perceived by the outward eye. but present nevertheless to the eye of the understanding, they may therefore be compared to the energy of a body in visible motion, or ictual energy as we have termod. But we have also molecular energies which are more analogous to the energy of position of stone at the top of a cliff. For instance, two bodies near one another may be endowed with a sprease of energy of position due to opposite electrical states, in which case they have a tendency to rush together, just as a stone at the top of a cliff has a tendency to rush to the earth. If the two bodies he allowed to rush together this energy of po-sition will be converted into that of visible motion, just as when the stone is allowed to drop from the cliff its energy of position converted into that of visible motions

There is finally a species of molecular energy at the summit of its flight and lodged on the and those two bodies are the earth and the top of a house; and this gave rise to the ques- stone. In like manner when we decompose ton, What has become of the energy of the carbonic acid gus into its constituents we stone? To answer this we must learn to regard | violently separate two hodies, that attract one cuerty, not as a quality, but rather as a thing, mother, and these are carbon and oxygen.

The chemist has always taught us to regard When, therefore, we have abtained in a separate of form and quality which take place in the we have at the same time obtained a kind of chemical world, we can always consult har energy of molecular position analogous on the balance with a certainly that it will not play small scale to the energy of a stone resting mon us false. But now the physical philosopher the top of a house, or on the edge of a cliff on BALFOUR STEWART.
